

O'Molloy Rally A Resounding Success As Chicago Man Elected Chieftain

THE annual O'Molloy Clan rally which was held over last weekend was a tremendous success with people travelling from all around the Midlands and as far away as America to take part.

The event began on Friday night with a lecture by Camin O'Brien in the Offaly Historical Society headquarters.

Mr O'Brien spoke to the group about the O'Molloy territory and castles associated with the family. The lecture was greatly appreciated by those present who found it to be extremely interesting and enlightening.

On Saturday morning a tour of the sites related to the O'Molloy Clan took place and included Durrow, Clonmacnoise, Eglis, Clonbeale House, Ballyboy and Rathlihen.

That night guests were treated to a Medieval Feast at Charleville Castle and a new O'Molloy Clan Chieftain was crowned. He is John Paul Molloy from Chicago and he took the mantle from the outgoing Chieftain Francis Molloy Berry from Durrow.

Outside a succulent pig was roasting on a spit while the clan were being entertained inside the castle by baritone John Molloy the son of the famous Birr hurler Paddy Molloy. Offaly Ceoltas also provided some great music on the night.

PRO of the Clan Councillor Danny Owens, said the event was a fantastic success and everything from the lecture to the tour and finally the Medieval Feast was wonderful. The O'Molloy Clan Association was formed in 2004 and constantly strives to develop connections with Clan members throughout the world.

Collections of photographs are regularly updated. Membership is open to anyone who has family links or has an interest in the O'Molloy Clan or its ancient territory of Firceall where they ruled from the 5th to the 17th centuries.
